CONSUL AT BRUSSELS TELLS HOW AMERICANS AIDED THE BELGIANS

Ethelbert Watts, for eight years United States Consul-General at Brussels, was a passenger aboard the American Line steamer Philadelphia, in today. He had remained in Brussels after the German occupation, and was returning upon a summons from the State Department.

"I am not allowed to comment widely upon what I have seen," said Mr. Watts, "but I will say that the Belgians are tremendously grateful for the aid they are receiving from America. The American Relief Commission's agents have not yet been able to reach all the outlying districts in Belgium and there starvation is very near; but wherever the work of relief has gone lives of thousands have been saved. Two free meals a day are being given away in Brussels.

"The Germans are scrupulously refraining from hindering the distribution of food or participating in any of its benefits. In cases where German soldiers are quartered with Belgian families who participate in the relief prompt payment for their share of the food is forwarded to the American agents. The Germans are aiding Americans in food distribution."

Fifteen Germans who had become naturalized British citizens were aboard the Philadelphia, coming to this country, they said, to escape the intolerable rigors of the spy craze in the British Isles. A German name or even a Teutonic cast of countenance was a positive menace to life, they declared.

Scotland is in throes of terror over the impending German invasion, which the Scotch feel is inevitable. The last of the German soldiers are being dug around Edinburgh and other cities near the east coast, and old men and boys are being armed to form coast patrols.

The most bloodthirsty passenger aboard the Philadelphia was six-year-old Clarence Lambert, the son of a former British army officer now in business in New York. Clarence, who wore a regulation suit of the British army, hadn't seen his father for four years, having lived with his grandmother at Brighton. The only way the grandmother could induce him to take the voyage was by holding out the promise that the Philadelphia would meet and sink several German cruisers on the way over. The lad's disappointment was great until Capt. Mills pointed out the Vaterland and other German ships lying peacefully in their berths in Hoboken on the way up the river and told him he could go over there and sink as many of them as he pleased any day in the week.

STATEN ISLAND NOTES.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Ross, recently married, sailed for Liverpool on Saturday on the steamship Franconia. They will make their home in England. The Civic League's Legislative Committee, composed of former Senator Howard R. Bayne, Lester L. Callahan, Albert De Roode, John Martin and ex-Assemblyman Alaire Shortt, is ready to look after all bills that are introduced in the Legislature affecting Staten Island.

The Hon. T. A. C. of Mariners' Harbor will hold a reunion dinner at the Hotel St. George next Saturday evening. Former Assemblyman Thomas J. Lanahan will be the toastmaster. This evening at Public School No. 6, Rossville, Magnus C. Thibault will deliver an illustrated lecture on "From Mine to Mint," and at the Great Kils Moravian Church, Glen Arnold Grove will lecture on "Italy, the Garden of Europe." The installation of officers of Star of Liberty Lodge, Shepherds of Bethlehem, will take place in Empire Hall to-morrow evening. Following the installation there will be a dance. A meeting of the Thacher W. C. T. Union will be held to-morrow afternoon in the chapel of Ballou's Snug Harbor. Mrs. May E. Merritt will sing. A report of the last national convention, held at Atlanta, Ga., will be made by County President Sarah Roberts Morris.

We Are After "One Million More" In 1915

To Have the Courage of One's Conviction
Is To Possess a Demand-Note On Success.

The first year of the new management of the House of Matthews has proven that the old firm was wise in its location and fortunate beyond price in friends.

That these conditions still exist is evidenced by the phenomenal trade we have enjoyed during the past year.

Assured of the confidence in this firm by its patrons, we are going out after an increase of ONE MILLION DOLLARS in sales in 1915.

Every Resource Will Be Utilized To Make
The "One Million More" Campaign a Reality.

Merchandise values such as this community has never experienced will be offered. Event after event, as out-of-the-ordinary as human experience and research can make possible, will be arranged.

Nothing more can be said at this time. Trade at Matthews and help us to get ONE MILLION MORE in 1915. It will pay you.
